

Steve Dalrymple Is New President of West Yost Associates

West Yost Associates (WYA) is pleased to announce the recent promotion of Steve Dalrymple to President of the firm. Steve has been involved in the management of WYA since 1992 and previously served as a Principal and Senior Vice President. His transition to President is both an exciting new chapter for the company and a natural transition of leadership. In his role as President, Steve will lead the operations and management of the firm's six California and Oregon offices. He will also continue to serve as a Principal and manager for engineering design and planning projects. Steve has more than 40 years of experience in water resources engineering. He has completed numerous studies and master plans for water resources development; wastewater reclamation; and water treatment, storage, transmission, and distribution projects. He has also planned and designed many water, sewage, and drainage facilities for public and private clients.

WYA founder Bruce West, previously the firm's President, will continue his role in the firm's leadership by serving as Chief Executive Officer, Chairman of the Board of Directors, and as an active Principal in a variety of water, wastewater, and stormwater projects.

West Yost Associates, Inc., is a successful and thriving consulting civil/environmental engineering firm providing planning, design, construction management, and environmental services for water, wastewater, and stormwater projects for clients throughout California and Oregon. The firm has offices in Davis, Roseville, Pleasanton, and Santa Rosa, California, as well as Eugene and Portland, Oregon.
